Goin' Down The Old Plank Road

Dear Friends,

On this beautiful June Sunday afternoon, there's a banjo picker on my porch ( I swear the birds are singing in the same key) and barbecue on the grill. Summer's here at last! We look forward to seeing you at our outdoor events this summer. Stop by Heritage Fest, Arts on the Prairie, or our Music by the Yards parties. You don't have to bring an instrument, just come and enjoy the music and visiting.

If you have any questions or ideas for future Plank Road events, please contact me at plankroad.org or at 708-442-0823.

I'm getting my guitar...that banjo player could use a little backup. See you this summer!

See you down the Plank Road,

-Marianne Mohrhusen

First Fridays in the City

It's a blast. What I'm talking about is the First Friday "night of music and community" at the Old Town School of Folk Music, next coming up July 7. There are more activities than you can shake a ...fiddle?....at. Full disclosure: I'm part of it. I run a jam in the basement. (What fun!) Dropping in with me the last couple of months has been incredible bluesman Chris Walz. We draw folks with all kinds of instruments: guitar, harmonica, mandolin, fiddle, accordion, even (last time) a melodeon! (A drummer's coming in July). And vocalists are especially welcome! Our music is upbeat stuff -- leaning toward blues and upbeat folk, but as we go around the circle, we're open to anything. You're encouraged to bring your instrument, a couple of songs, dancing shoes, a date or friends. Doors open at 6:00pm, it involves only a $4 donation. Upbeat is not your thing? Look at the bigger picture (doesn't this sound like a great evening?):

6:30 Song Circle , String Jam, Songwriters Critique and Exchange or Skip's Back Porch Jam (in B-1)
 7:00 Student Ensembles Performance (main stage)
 7:30 Square Dance - y'all come! (first floor)
 8:00 Reel Music Documentary Series (resource center)
 8:45 Featured Performer - July TBA (main stage)
 9:00 Ecstatic Dance w/Andrea (I don't know either)
 10:20 Open Stage (by lottery; come before 7 p.m.)
 and there's other jamming too!

The Peterson Strobo Flip Tuner Review

This is not your average tuner. Have you ever played a piano right after it was tuned by a professional? Big difference, right? Well this tuner sets the tempering just right on your stringed instruments.

Reading it takes a little getting used to. You must watch for the display to stop spinning to know you're in tune. It was well worth the time since all my instruments sound better. I decided to order the Strobo Flip which is the latest offering.

Go to www.petersontuners.com and check out the demo.

This tuner is for people who really appreciate the beauty of a well tuned instrument.

Gettin' It in Yer Bones

The end of the barn dance season brings to mind just how much I love old time fiddle music. Getting together with friends, (and even strangers!), to play a string of fiddle tunes is always very rewarding. The camaraderie, fellowship, and mutual enjoyment of this music make it an appealing genre. One can travel anywhere throughout our country and round up a group of fiddlers who all know at least a handful of the same tunes, and would be happy to share all of the others they know as well.

The question is, how does one learn these tunes? Being musically illiterate, there's only one way for me - note by note. I usually bring a small recording device with me when I know there will be an opportunity to hear a new tune, and then spend hours at home endlessly replaying it until it's embedded in my mind and my motor muscle memory. As the Russians say: 'Repetition is the mother of all learning.' I call it 'getting' it in yer bones' and, unless I can play a tune in my head at three in the morning, it just won't stick.

A better way to learn these tunes is to have someone break them down for you. An example of this took place during Pop Wagner's most recent visit to the Jones Family Music Studio in Lombard, IL the last week in April. Pop, a 'poet lariat' like Will Rogers, combined his wry wit and some interesting historic facts with the tunes he broke down for a group of students during an afternoon fiddle workshop. This year Pop gave us five different tunes to work on and Tom Jones was kind enough to record the whole affair and burn CDs for the students. Pop played every tune through and then lined out each part with us until we could all play the entire tune together. By the time we were into the fifth tune, however, we were getting a little overwhelmed, so Tom's CD came in very handy when I got back home. After a few weeks of practice our core group of fiddlers will have these tunes properly settled into their skeletal structures.

The process of sharing and learning fiddle tunes has repeated itself among the faithful for centuries. I am very pleased to be a part of this time honored tradition, and hope to be one of the folks who will pass it along to a new generation of 'dyed in the wool' fiddlers who will not allow this music to pass away.

The Season of the Banjo

It was summer by the time I learned to play the banjo, I had had one, an instrument borrowed from a friend, since the Christmas before. It sat neglected most of the winter and much of the spring, needing a string, needing to be tuned. I had the Pete Seeger book, How to Play the 5-String Banjo, and a couple others that I paged through from time to time.

A bunch of us were putting off adulthood for another year, contented to learn more about picking and singing, curious about old-time mountain music, stricken by the reedy voices that echoed through our stereo speakers ... The grass was wet in the backyard of my parents' home. I was in my bare feet and remember them being wet and speckled with grass clippings.

It was morning and I was sleepy. The sun was up over the house already and it felt warm on my shoulders and face. You remember these sorts of details when the fortunate moment arrives, the moment your mind and body assemble enough knowledge and skill to first spark the strings of a 5-string banjo.

That was twenty-four summers ago, enough time to get pretty good on a banjo. And enough time, reckon, for some of the perceptions of youth to harden into pure fact. Wars are bad. Working people have it rough. Nincompoops, cheaters and the willfully blind are among those in government and corporate leadership.

Twenty-four summers after first learning to play banjo, life blazes by with...cable modem speed. I can do email but am still new to cell phones. In the time it took to figure out how to download a song on to iPod, sixty four million television viewers elected the new American Idol. And now the Catholic Church has become fearful of a movie made by Opie Taylor...But I'm not going to think about any of this today.

It's summer and I've got the day off. It rained last night and it's a lovely morning. I'm on the back porch having coffee, listening to the birds and Art Thieme's new CD.

It's warm and damp and pleasant and everything is green. After a while I may walk down by the river to see the geese. Maybe I'll kick off my shoes and pick some banjo...

CD Review

I've Got the House to Myself

I didn't "just" buy this CD. I bought it 3 years ago on my last trip up to Alaska. I saw David Grier play at the Seldovia Summer Solstice Festival and bought one of his CDs then.

I liked it so much that I kept loaning it out to other guitar playing friends, because I was sure they would like it too. I loaned it out so much, that I bought myself another copy recently along with one of his older CDs.

Wow! David Grier is a fabulous guitar player! He's a flat picker in basically bluegrass style, but his playing goes WAY beyond bluegrass. The CD is "I've Got the House to Myself" by David Grier, © 2002 Dreadnought Recordings. I ordered online at www.davidgrier.com.

My favorite tune is Ookpic Waltz, or Bill Cheatum, or Black Mountain Rag, or ???

This is happy music. It makes me happy just to listen to it. Tim O'Brien writes in the liner notes, "All guitar fans need to hear the latest from this truly original artist." I completely agree. I also think he spends entirely too much time with the house to himself. (Okay, so I'm a little bit jealous--I'd love that much time with the house to myself!) Listen online and buy this CD.

You'll be glad you did.
